Louisville Market.

Louisville Market.
We have had a strong tobacco market this week. Offerings have been larger than for some weeks previous to the bolidays. The demand has been strong and active for all classes and grades of Burley, save perhaps bright trash. Good off efflers and cutters have been especially wanted and bidding has been lively.

New tobacco was offered a little more liberally and found ready buyers at relatively high prices, $27.50 being reached a little prices, $27.50 being reached a late were made at from $15 to $30. That tobacco is offered very springly and there still seems little dem und for this type.

We will probably arrange for regular quotations of new tobacco in next week's issue—Farmers Home Journal.

We note the following asless of Breckenridge and Meade county new tobacco during the past week. 2 bhads Meade county leaf and lugs at $14.50 and $4.20; bhads Breckenridge county leaf, lugs and trash at $10 to $4.30; 11 hhds do. lugs and $3.575 to $1.00.

A Strong Illustration

A Strong Illustration.

A Hard Shell preacher wished to bring forth a good illustration, as he thought, and hence he took a walnut, as he called it, into the pulpit with him, and something to crack it with. On month e sail: in the course of his sermon he sail: "My friends, you see this walnut—"My friends, you see this walnut—"edl, this outer hull is like the Methodists—soft and spongy, with no strength into it; see, I even break it with my fingers; "and suitting the action to the words, he disclosed the inner nut, and said: "This is like the Missionary Baptists—hard and dry, with no substance in it; but the kurnal—the kurnal, in friends, is like the good ofl primitive larat-shell Baptist faith, full of fatness.

hard-shell Baptist faith, full of fatness and sweetness."

He then proceeded to crush the "wal-nut," and give his hearers an ocular demonstration of his illustration, but, behold, it was rotten. And, to the utter astonishment of his hearers, he cried out: "By jinks! it's rotten.

The South's Advantages.

Hon. Edward Atkinson's review of the world's from and steel trade, which was recently published in the Manufacturers' Record, of Baltimore, has attracted such wide attention, in Europea swell as in America, that it has been issued in a mamphet of 50 pages by the Manufacturers' Record. Mr. Atkinson discusses the iron and steel making resources and requirements of the world, and shows how rapidly the consumption of these metals is increasing. He claims that it is not a question of where to find a market for all the iron that wall is not a question of where to find a market for all the iron that wall the produced by the consumption of these metals in creasing the claim of the world's the consumption of the second of the consumption of the second of the last thirty or forty build intrances repress.

It is steadily increasing demand for iron. After reviewing the course of the world's iron trade for the last thirty or forty years, and showing that England has reached the utmost limit of its production, and that the cost of its iron making must constantly increase, Mr. Atkinson proves that this country must supply the increase which the world's requirements will demand. He believes that the South possesses the supprise of proximity of unlimited supplies of ore, coal and limeschoe, which must insure this section becoming the iron and steel making center, not only of supplies of ore, coal and linestonic, with must lineare this section becoming the iron and steel make the country of the iron and steel make verifit. Mr. Atkin-son's article is probably the most brill-iant paper on any economical subject that has appeared for several years, and it is of profound interest to every busi-ness man in the country. It is of special value to everyone interested in the South, and in the development of the ninearl resources of this section. The Manufacturers Record has readered the South as signal service in the republica-tion of the section of the section of the section. The present service was a supported in that paper a few months ago, has proved of vast benefit to this section. The price of the pamplet is 25 cents.
